Teacher's Remarks:

A bit of a mixed bag for Zurab who shares many of his strong points, such as reasonable ratio of trained teachers to pupils and good levels of participation, with others in his regional class. But his weaknesses are clear; he's perceived as being neither fair nor open to new ideas in education, and he doesn't much like teachers having a say. With this weak spot, and his middling scores in political will it's certainly a case of 'Must Try Harder'. Some help from the Fast Track Initiative classmates would come in very handy.
