Teacher's Remarks:

Ham has done well to almost close the gap on primary education since 2000 but it's shame that he hasn't paid equal attention across all the EFA goals. With a really good share of public spending going to education he appears to put a high priority on education. But the charging of fees lets him down, unfortunately. It's worrying, too, that so few girls enrol in secondary level. He needs to put his money to good use in the next period, in order to make progress towards all of EFA.
